

DANDY

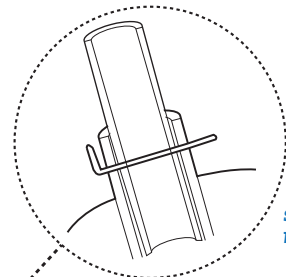

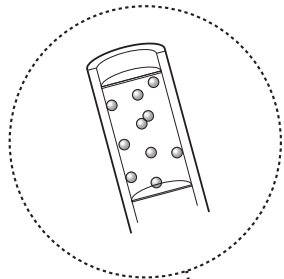

Dandy is an active intervention designed to encourage play in the Great Hall of Chicago's Union Station. A slight touch is enough to activate it; once in motion Dandelion encourages others to join in the fun. With sound from the rattles at the end of each tube, visual drama, and motion; Dandelion activates the space and creates opportunities for people to connect.

Dandy is designed to connect people, rolling around the Great Hall, gently bumping from person to person, it draws people breaking the ice and opening strangers up to one another.

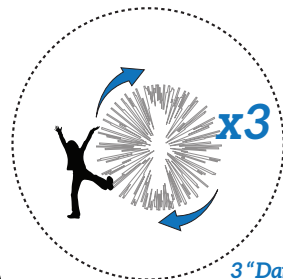

cross section detail

rattles at the ends of the tubes shake and hiss as dandy rolls around the great hall.

simple PVC connections make for simple assembly.

3 "Dandy" assemblies encourage passerby's to stop and play.

